

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A data converting apparatus is disclosed which receives packet data made of content data supplemented with recording control information to be referenced upon recording of the content data. When the data converting apparatus outputs the received packet data to another apparatus, the converting apparatus converts the recording control information to a specific value if the other apparatus is expected to function normally only by use of that specific value replacing the recording control information.